PRODUCT REVIEW: Unikeep

Every now and then, a product comes along to totally change your way of thinking, planning, and organizing--- and the Unikeep product line does just that! More than a binder, Unikeep products hold CD's, diskettes, and other items that ordinary binder pockets can't contain. They are stackable, customizable, and very easy to use. They're also sealed, which means you can store memories as well as important documents inside and not worry about taking them out in bad weather. Did I mention they're recyclable, too?

I've been using the Unikeep binders for a few months now, and am having such fun finding new ways to use them in my office, workshop, and at home. I'm in the process of developing an entire line of organizing kits, and I like to use the 1/2 inch size Unikeep as idea catchers for my notes, keeping each kit separate but within reach. My husband took a few to work to share with his coworkers, and they store software discs and documentation in them, as well as engineering works in progress. My son loves them for his paperwork, and they've become invaluable to organize our home school lessons.

Since Unikeep binders use plastic rings rather than metal ones, they don't pinch your fingers, and are ideal for students-- trust me, your back to school buying will never be the same! Hobbies and artistic projects can easily be stored inside, from swatches to patterns- all in one place and organized.

You can purchase Unikeep binders at Staples, Office Max, and Office Depot. to view the entire product line and learn more about this exciting way to conquer paper clutter, visit their website at www.unikeep.com .
